PROSITES MOVES LA OFFICE TO ACCOMMODATE EXPANSION AND NEW TEAM MEMBER ADDITIONS

Temecula, CA – March 22, 2007 – ProSites, Inc., the nation’s leading provider of high quality website design and Internet marketing services for medical and dental professionals, is pleased to announce the opening of a new development office in Los Angeles, California in March, 2007. Located at 3255 Wilshire Blvd. in Los Angeles, California, the new ProSites Research, Development and Design (RDD) expansion was necessary to accommodate the division’s growth in recent months.

The new facility adds nearly six times the square footage of the previous facility, and now comfortably incorporates the new research, development and design operations in one Los Angeles office. The division also includes ample space to accommodate future growth going forward.

Driven by ever-growing new customer volume, ProSites has applied substantial resources in the expansion of the RDD Los Angeles operation. During the last 12 months this division has quadrupled its employee base, primarily in the master engineer group. The Company has also re-directed funds to the areas of development labs and quality assurance testing environments in order to accommodate the company’s emergent needs.

“We are extremely pleased with this growth and expansion,” said ProSites CEO Lance McCollough. “Our move into a new Los Angeles facility provides much needed space for the ProSites RDD team and reflects the significance this group of professionals continues to contribute to our overall website design innovations,” McCollough said.
